THE havor wrought by the floods in North China is not readily comprehended by those to the Government Civil Hospital, where he living at a distance from the scene, but some faint idea of the magnitude of the disaster that has overtaken the country may be gathered from the statement in the Tientsin paper that the number of the persons rendered the steamer Bingapore left Bangkok with two homeless in Chilli is estimated at four millions. This is in one province alone, and refers to the inundations of the Peibo and other streams. There remains the tremendour overflow of the Yellow River, and the widespread ruin it has caused in Honan. Anhwei, and Shantung. Nor are these the only districts that have suffered from floods, The country round Kiukiang and Hankow is submerged owing to the overflow of the Yangteze, and there have been very serious floods in the province of Fukien and the island of Formosa. In the latter it is reported that upwards of three thousand persons have been drowned. It is sincerely to be hoped that this report is an exaggeration, but little doubt can be entertained that the floods in South Formosa have been attended with serious loss of life. At present the distress does not appear to be very acute or the privations very great in Chihli, owing partly to its being summer and to the crops in the country bordering the hundations being exceptionally fine. But it is to be feared that when the autumn comes there the frontier. The Arsenal in Kirin has now will be much want and misory among the millions who have been dispossessed of their more efficiently, in order to turn out enough homes by the cruel waters. In the country inundated by the Yellow River, although help is not argently needed just now, it is expected the people will be in a state of extreme penury and distress when the cold weather sets in, with no provision to meet it.

Any civilised Government would years ago, after the innumerable experiences of these recurring calamities by flood, have of a hot summer's day must cocasion the emplified by the fact that the very existence of kept in the same loyal manner in every town and taken some effective measures to prevent warrant but plead powerfully for the employment of the country's utmost resources and should their bearers slip or suffer any ing been bereft of a dearly loved child, had her other Viceroys throughout the Empire were President), and other prominent personages. to repel so formidable a foe. outlay, scientific engineering, and ceaseless watchfulness the enemy has been held bay. The Yellow River, which is the primary cause of "China's Borrow," might successfully grappled with by engineering science and turned into a blessing instead of curse to tens of thousands of thirsty acres, a means of welcome irrigation instead of a source of disastrous inundation Useless now as a means of inland communication, it might be converted into a great highway of commerce scarcely less important than its southern neighbour the Yangteze. A correspondent of the N. C. Daily News in a letter d propos of the recent floods and the evils resulting from them points out, as an antidote to the climatic evils of North

China, the desirability of utilizing the Yellow River for the purposes of irrigation, rendering the agriculturists independent of the capricious rainfall and protecting them from these calamitous floods. After pointing out how this could be done, he goes on to remark :- " No doubt this would be a gigantic undertaking; but China is a gigantic empire possessed of gigantic resources, both of labour and material, and also-when it comes to the pinch-of money. And the benefite and manifold character of the benefits would also be gigantic." It would be necessary to engage foreign engineers, and it might be necessary to arrange a foreign oan, for although former rulers of China constructed that monumental work the Grand Canal, it is to be feared there is neither rightly if subscribed. The Chinese do not trust their officials, and therefore although there is plenty of capital in China it is kept carefully looked out of sight. Appeals for oans are sparingly responded to, the small sums occasionally raised as really forced contributions classes. Even comconnected with the mandarins, viewed with distrust and disfavour. How

Japanese wall-paper made in imitation leather first came before the foreign public at the Austrian Exhibition of 1871, but its capabilities were so imperfectly understood at that time that its exhibiter, Mr. Yamada Jirobei offered it as a substitute for carpeting. It was then made in pieces 36 feet long, and of various widths, but though its sup sior quality evoked favourable notice it failed to commond itself as floor covering, being too thin and fragile for such a purpose. From an English gentleman. however, who had observed the adaptability the fabric as wall-paper, Mr. famada received an order, and subsequently a small export business. was done in the article. In 1877 Mr. Yamada exhibited 200 rolls in the Paris Exhibition, and in thefollowing year, attention having been directed o the product employment is the Government Printing Bureau was offered to him which however, he refused. About this period various competitors entered the field and bad workmanship soon caused a decrease in the export business. The sugar industry in Queensland is about to receive a rade shock in the withdrawal of the Colonial Sugar Company's interest from that colony. In accordance with the measure adopted by the Queensland Government some five years ago, the introduction of Kanaka labourers for the plantations will entirely cease at the end of the present year; and as the existing Ministry has intimated its intention of not inerfering with the policy mapped out by Sir Samuel Griffith's Government, there seems to be but a poor prospect that sugar cultiration can be payably continued in Queensland.
